Impact of COVID-19 on Contemporary Indian Politics: New Dimensions and Challenges

Organized by Department of Political Science

Berhampore Girls College

Berhampore, Murshidabad, West Bengal

Date: 27th June, 2020, Time: 3:00p.m. to 5:00p.m.

About the Webinar:

The pandemic caused by COVID-19 has an extensive impact on global socio-economic and political structure. India is a country with having large population density is also affected by this unseen enemy. Since last few months, entire world, as well as India, is strongly combating against this deadly virus. COVID-19 has not only affected our body, it has an impact even on our mind, society, and state. COVID has an impact on Indian life from a different perspective.

What is the role of Indian politics in COVID or Post COVID phase is indeed a big question to the political scientists and experts. It is a fact that the Indian economy is entering a contraction phase after a prolonged slowdown. The Indian polity has a unique character of coordination. It is expected that in a democratic set-up, politics can be used to influence policy in the interests of the majority by collective mobilization.

This webinar aims to understand the political challenges before Indian political structure during COVID and post-COVID phase. In this discussion attempts to be taken to develop a wider spectrum to address socio-economic issues within the policy measures.

Objectives:

- Impact of COVID on Indian polity
- Socio-economic pattern

- Migrated Labour issue
- New political ideas and thoughts
